Berlin, March 24.

THE Corpse of her Prussian Majesty of 'Blessed and Glorious Memory having 'been received by the great Marshal the 'Count of Witgenstein on the Frontier 'of Lunenburg, and conducted from thence through Magdeburg and Brandenburg; arrived the 21st Instant at Spandow, under the discharge of the Artillery placed on the Fortifications there: Whereupon immediate Orders were given for bringing it the next Day into this City, and that the Funeral Pomp should begin after 8 a Clock in the Evening. Accordingly one Battallion of Grenadiers was placed about 5 in the Afternoon in the outer Court-yard of the Palace, and another Battallion stood drawn up before the great Draw-bridge; on the other side of that Bridge 2 Battallions of the Foot Guards lined the Streets as far as the Royal Gate. A little before this was done, the King's Coach, with those of the Royal Prince, of the Margraves, and of the Nobility, attended by about 400 Men carrying Torches, went to meet and receive the Corpse near the Forest, about a Quarter of a Mile on this Side of Spandow; And the Nobility of the Adjacent Districts appeared on Horseback according to the Directions given them. The King's Master of the Ceremonies having disposed all Matters for the Solemnity, a Signal was given by letting off a Rocket, and immediately all the Bells in this City were toll'd, and 36 Demy-Culverins, with 100 other Pieces of Cannon, discharged. The Streets through which the Corpse was to be brought were illuminated. The Guard of 100 Swiss clad in Mourning made a Lane in the innermost Court-yard of the Palace; and the Footmen of the Ministers of the Court were ranged at some Distance from them with Tapers of Wax in their Hands. The March began half an Hour after 8 in the following Manner. First came the Marshal or Harbinger of the Court, on Horseback to clear the Way; followed by the great Master of the Forrest, with his Servants. Then the Led-horses of the Nobility 3 in a Rank; and 66 Coaches cover'd with Black. Next came the King's Pages with their Tutor, who were followed by 80 Noblemen of the Country, as also the Gentlemen of the Court; then 12 Trumpets and a Kettle-drum; And his Excellency the great Marshal and Count Bulau immediately preceeded the Corpse. The open Hearse, which was attended on both sides by 24 of the Gentlemen of the Horse Guards with Wax Tapers in their Hands,) was drawn by 8 Horses; and the 4 Corners of the Velvet Pall laid over the Coffin, were born up by Monsieur d' Ausson great Master of the Horse to her late Majesty; by her great Chamberlain; and by 2 other Noblemen. Major General Groot with the 2 Companies of the Life Guards, which met the Corpse on the Frontier of Lunenburg, followed the Hearse; as did also a great many Coaches wherein were the Ladies of the Court.

Assoon as the Hearse came to the Chappel; the Royal Prince and the other Princes, together with the Margravine, and the Ladies of the Court, met it, and the Royal Corpse being taken from it, was carried by 10 Noblemen of the Bedchamber into the Chappel, and being placed on a stately Pedestal built for that Purpose, the Royal Crown, wherewith the Queen was formerly Crowned, was laid on a Pillow of Velvet on the Coffin, but the Scepter and Globe were placed upon a Velvet Cushion laid on a Table; and both were cover'd with black Crape. The Roof of the Chappel within, as far as the Mausoleum extends, is laid over with Silver, as are also the Ornaments and Statutes: The Pillars and Walls are covered with black Velvet adorn'd with her Majesty's Arms; The Statutes represent the Virtues in a lamenting Posture; the Illuminations are contrived in so artful a Manner, as fills the Spectators with wonder. The Ambassadors of Sweden, Poland, and Savoy, with the other forreign Ministers have had the Curiosity to see this Mausoleum, they own never saw any thing of that Nature, so glorious and well design'd. The Corpse is constantly attended by one of the Lords of the Bedchamber, and 2 Grooms of the Bedchamber, 4 Pages, 2 Military Officers, viz. one belonging to the Life Guards and the other to the Swiss, and each have with them 24 Centinels.
